Such is the Gist of Lawyer Forrest's Argument in Defense of

DR.CRONIN'S ALLEGED MURDERERS

The Attorney Ridicules the State's Witnesses, Who, He Says,

HAD MOST REMARKABLE MEMORIES.

The Prosecution Charged With Blunders That Seriously Weaken Their Case,

Mr. Forrest continued his argument for the defense in the Cronin trial yesterday. He indulged in a good deal of ridicule of the State and its witnesses, and declared that the expert testimony did not show how Cronin came to his death.

CHICAGO, December 9 .- At the opening of the Cronin trial this morning Mr. Forrest resumed his address to the jury in behalf of the defense. He argued at length on the

Call it faith, call it blind chance, call it over-rating Providence, call it what you will, either plain faith, chance or overruling Providence, it did for Martin Burke, the humble laborer, what his counsel and all the witnesses in the world couldn't have done. Suppose that the world couldn't have done. Suppose that the clothes had not been found; suppose that the clothes had not been found; suppose that the segument had been made by these gentlemen that they had been sent abroad, and what an argument, too, they would have made in the form of a narration; they could have described the box going across the stormy sea, they could have talked about the ship that held its guilty secret, they could have speculated upon what was being done, what was done, and what was going to be done.

BEGGS' ACQUITTAL PREDICTED. Suppose that you had believed it and drawn the conclusion that they urged you to draw in their opinion, and that they would have urged you to draw in their closing; suppose then you had imposed the death penalty and it had been executed; and then suppose that the truth had been discovered, and the clothes found in the North town sewer. What justification could you have made to the people of the State of Illinois what justification could you have made in your own breast to your God, what justifica-tion could you have made in the form of your own conscience and yourself?

Mr. Forrest went on to say that the jury would be forced under Mr. Foster's argument to acquit Beggs. The acquittal of Beggs was equivalent to saying that there was no conspiracy in Camp 20; there being was no conspiracy in Camp 20; there being no conspiracy the case, of course, falls to the ground, and the acquittal of the other defendants follows as a logical consequence. They must look elsewhere, and it was not difficult to find 12 men who had some sort of connection with the murder, outside of Camp 20. Simends was one of them and 11 others were unknown.

TWO CLAN-NA-GAEL FACTIONS. He alluded to the public prejudice against his clients and showed how it was to the financial interest of some of the principal witnesses for the State—Dinan and the Carlsons -- to show that it was a white horse that took Dr. Cronin away and it was in the Carlson cottage that he was killed. Dinan is receiving $100 per week from a dime museum manager, where the horse is on exhibition, and the Carlsons are making money fast by charging an admission fee to the cottage. He went on:

comrades to the British government and sent comrades to British government and sent our comrades to British prisons by telling who they were. So you find that this wing has been assisting the presecution, that it has labored day and night. And so the other parties have given their services and their money, and the revenues of these L5,000 Clan-na-Gael through-out the country have been adding the present. out the country have been alding the prosecu

THE WITNESSES RIDICULED. Now, therefore, you find one wing is on the Now, therefore, you find one wing is on the witness stand. Do you suppose that has not made a difference? All these men who have fert Ireland for Ireland's good—because the English police are after them—they come from Milbank, they come from other places, swoop—of the value of $50 each. Milbank, they come from other places, swooping from the prisons of England crying "Re venge, revenge, revenge." And you find them wenge, revenge, revenge." And you find them in the witness box, you find them around the tables urging on the prosecution, and you come here as a jury to pass upon the facts and to examine the motive behind it, and it is the ancient Irish malices of ar as that is concerned. Now, gentlemen, there is not, a witness that has been discovered in this case since the coroner's jury returned its verdict that is not a puspicious witness.

I never saw such a body of witnesses, and you never-did. They have eyes like the eagle. Like owis they see longer and further by night than by day. Their hearing is as sensitive as that of the deer that roams our northern forests. What extraordinary perceptive faculty, what reasoning powers, what prodigious memeries. Every one of them does something remarkable, so as to impress upon his mind the uity, what reasoning powers, what prodigious memories. Every one of them does something remarkable, so as to impress upon his mind she date of the occurrence he testifies to. It was not some public event which occurred and can be proved, but they do some remarkable thing theseselves to fix the date. Such intellectual grammastics were never before heard of. In the future time, when the writers of intellectual science want to get the best illustrations of a full, accurate, prodigious memory, they will search the records of the Cronin trial and inquire into the memories of the witnesses on behalf of the State.

MINUTE CIRCUMSTANTIAL EVIDENCE. Mr. Forrest then proceeded, with much surcusm and ridicule, to touch upon the testimony of many witnesses for the prosecution, claiming that they all acted as if they had been trained to bolster up a desperate case, Mrs. Couklin and Milkman Mertes and Mrs. Hoertel testified to occurrences which they claimed to have witnessed when the shadows had fallen, yet they were able to give minute descriptions of the persons concerned in them; could tell their complexions and the kind of clothes they were. The trouble with this evidence was that it was

Mr. Forrest then took up the expert testimony and considered it at great length, reading many extracts from the verbatim report of the testimony, to show not only that the doctors could not determine the cause of death, but that they could not even be confident whether or not the wounds were inflicted before or after death.

THE STATE'S ALLEGED BLUNDERS. The State, he said, had indicted these men for the murder of Dr. Cronin, by inflicting blows on his head and face. They must prove that, or the prisoners must be set free. If they failed, it was their own fault in making a blunder in the indictment. He exclaimed:

ment. He exclaimed:

I tell you, gentlemen, we can say that we do denounce the doctor's murder. That has been done sufficiently, God knows. The whole world has denounced it, and thundered it at the heads of my clients for months. It was a murder, a cruel murder: but I tell you, gentlemen, that in your Court House they would, in the name of the law commit a legal murder to sastain a theory, to sustain a blunder. The whole thing of it was made necessary by the original blunder.

There was no evidence, he said that the ows on Dr. Cronin's bead caused death. They were not severe; the skull was nowhere fractured. The speaker then took up the matter of the trunk, the key and the cotton hatting, which occupied his attention until the court adjourned for the day. Mr. Forrest will probably occupy all of to-morrow with his argument. Captain Schuettler returned from Milwaukee this morning, but without Cooney, though a bloody trunk, a missing owner and other mysterious elements of the case promised well for another Cronin sen-

Life's current coin is made;
With that we drive
The most substantial der, let us tell you to buy something sensible-something use-ful - SOMETHING TO WEAR. It's the only thing that will give satisfaction to both giver and receiver. Money invested in toys is money wasted. Common sense pea-ple will turn to something more useful and substantial, and, by so doing, not only get the full value in return for their money, but also set a most excellent example to their children for not spending their money foolishly. Of all the useful
